

15th December, 2003.

Dear Ms Jowell,

I hear you want to know what people want from the BBC.

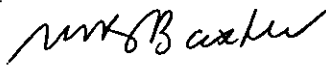

I worked for the Corporation for many years in the fifties and sixties. I was so proud to work for such an institution. It's a wonderful Thing to be proud of the place and people you work for. So sad To see what the Beeb has become.

What I want from the BBC is Impartiality first and foremost and for It to be a service which serves ALL the population and not just the 18 to 30 year olds. We, at the start of our seventies, have had to Invest in digital TV only to have something worth watching. Night After night terrestrial TV is moronic, boring or just plain awful.

I want the BEEB to be something like it was in the glory days. The Days of Hugh Carleton Green and others like him.

Now, it is a travesty of its former self.

Yours sincerely,

Margaret Baxter,
