

Sent: 16 December 2003 12:53
To: BBC Charter Review
Subject: BBC Charter Review

From: Paul Bosanko,

I work from home and listen to the BBC daily on my PC via their web pages. They are extremely informative in all their news features and are very quick bringing the latest updates.

I find that their reporting seems to me to be impartial, contrary to what a minority of people I've heard complain. I suspect this is because of their outlandish views and because we don't fall in line with them it's their duty to complain.

It is also possible to listen again to the shows missed or because it takes your fancy. I particularly like Radio 5 for the comedy programmes. Especially the old ones "The Goon Show" to name but one.

The BBC television service is second to none and I cannot praise it enough. I only hope that we don't go down the "Advertising" road, if it's going to happen let it be between programme changes!

Regards

PB