Dear BBC. (and the others too!)

Will you do "something" about the often unnecessary music which Infects television Documenting's

I have just watched a programme about "Stonehenge" and sure enough the music intrudes - indeed it sounds as though the lady had a leg trapped! Keep it Down please. - Even "Baldwin's" archaeology programme has it in - and sometimes louder than the "Voice over commentary." - good, well made shows need very little of it! - bring it to heel please - Ta! even the Open University lectures have it in!!!

Oh, and when I was doing National service we were told there was an outcrop of "Blue stone" not all that far from ~~Stonehenge~~ Stonehenge! and they may not have come from Precelly Mountains at all! I can't remember the Details - in those days we just climbed over the fence and went in. 50 years ago!

Ta!

To change the subject. I have "Weather Glass" which is marked in Inches for Pressure - there are millions of such Barographs - (these can the weather forecast from time to time show the Doobers as in Inches. (Please - Gravel!) about the weather Gents (Crotty! often much nicer than the Weather! again Ta!
