Dear Sir,

I am writing with regard to the BBC Charter review public consultation.

With regard to the radio I consider that Radio 2 should return to being an easy listening radio station (as it still is on Sundays) playing music up until the 1970s.

The more modern music should be on Radio 1

but the unpopular music should be taken off as the listening figures have decreased for this station over a number of years.

As far as television is concerned more of the popular older programmes from the 50's 60's and 70's should be repeated particularly programmes like Dad's Army, Open All Hours, Morecambe and Wise etc. I was glad to hear that the Two Ronnies will be coming back this year and Bruce Forsyth's Didn't they Do Well on Thursday evenings is a very good quiz show.

I hope that my comments
will be taken into consideration
I am aged 37.

Yours sincerely,
Ian Corbett
