Dear Tessa

As a labour voter and election helper I view with a great deal of disquiet at your negative approach to the BBC. If it is placed within the remit of Ofcom (a body that is so supine in its approach to powerful interests) and the licence fee becomes abolished then I feel you would rather have Murdoch running the television culture of this country. Already the philistines are at the door with caveats on what the BBC should do and not do and I feel that you and the govt have not shown any desire to fight them. You have set in motion inquiries by people who do not have the BBC interests at heart and if their recommendations are to the detriment to the BBC and you act on them then I will cease to support the govt at the next election.

Yours Chris Cox
