The BBC.

Dear Sir or Madam.

I have an overriding complaint about certain programmes on TV.

I am a keen watcher of documentaries. I hold in high regard such people as - David Attenborough, Chris Beardshaw, Doctor Bellamy - and so on.

Imagine my disappointment - yes - and disgust, when heavy, penetrating music is dubbed in! Totally at odds with the scene, and what is attempted as information & atmosphere.

I have to say that the

BBC is not alone. Other stations do this, and I can only feel that the young people, a few years back, walked around all day, plugged in to something. Background noise was a way of life to them.

There are still some of us who can appreciate the silence of nature, only to realize there is a lot to be heard with the process of nature.

Please get it toned down - or eliminated.

One other thing. Weather forecasts, can be low to straight to the point delivery, and not to be greeted with "Hi There!" and a little less female prattle.

I must end with a compliment Radio 4 is superb. The morning interviews are so informative & honest. Please see that we do not ^{get} any USA plans. It is an insult to those of us who appreciate our beautiful language

Yours most sincerely
Oliver J. Grant.
