

Sent: 16 December 2003 12:38
To: BBC Charter Review
Subject: Why Should I pay.

Dear Ser/Madam

You probably receive correspondence like this all the time.

Why should I pay for a TV licence when I do not and do not want to view any BBC programmes, or listen to any BBC radio stations.

People should be given the option if they would like to pay for the service.

For example I have Sky, If I did not have a external TV aerial I dare say that Sky could block the BBC programmes.

They could even design TV's that only received signals from Digital boxes or cable etc so it would be impossible to receive any BBC programmes.

My feelings is it all about money. Too many people in high placed upper management jobs earning to much money form licence payers like me. They are the ones who do not wish to change anything.

I view about 5 hours of TV programmes per week. The majority of my viewing is movies or watching DVD/Videos aprox 10 hours.

Why Should I Pay.

John Gallantree