Dear Sir

What I value most about the BBC are:- Its coverage of news (but there should be more news of events and life in "Other Countries") - World Service broadcasts - Programmes such as "Question Time", "Any Questions", "The Moral Maze" - its support for voluntary organisations.

The BBC must adapt to cope with changes in technology & culture but due to the rapidity of technical change and the fickle nature of cultural tastes it should beware of too frequent & too abrupt changes.

Yes the BBC should run commercial services like "Radio Times", books, cd, DVDs magazines etc but not have adverts on its TV/Radio programmes.

I find the way the BBC is run & regulated satisfactory and long may it continue as something pretty reliable in an unreliable world.

Yours faithfully

Geary
