Dear Sirs,

By 31 March my husband was very ill & died on April 24th so I missed your original review date. Sorry!

Having seen totally unsuitable T.V. right after 9pm, I believe 10pm would be a better cut off point, as standards seem to get ever lower - regretfully.

Later I have seen stuff that I don't consider suitable to show at all. Why is it necessary to pander to the lowest element of humanity?

to respond to your two questions.
BBC News is excellent, as are Arts + Educational coverage. with,
I dare to suggest, adequate different national, regional + communal throughout the U.K. I have been heartened by recent films about the blind, deaf etc: <sup>cheeky etc</sup> <sub>are sure!</sub>
Could we resurrect some of PAUL SCARFIO's wonderful films, poetry etc — preferably live — if that is possible!

I don't feel qualified to comment on technological etc changes as I'm not yet even computer-literate! Maybe this is the right place to request less "flicking lights etc" amongst the BBC News.
Apart from me finding such disturbing it is seriously undesirable for young eyes — + unnecessary.
Sincerely
Rosemary Haigh.
