

Dear Sir/Madam

As a single person with an aged parent who relies on me & on very low wages who can not subscribe to any of the various "extras" like a mobile phone or web via the older slower or broadband certainly can not run to paying for TV

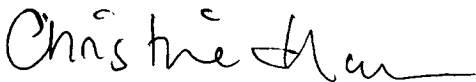

Whilst we do not watch a lot of TV we like it very much when the BBC does something with a high cultural element (the culture show the Friday night review Mother loves it if there is an opera on

We do not watch any of the soaps but do love the horse racing and I am a football & rugby fan Well its too expensive to go and see Spurs so an occasional glimpse of them on TV is great

We would not miss the ITV if it vanished off into the mist but we would miss the BBC

If the Beeb was pay to view by what ever means the TV would have to go and we would feel very bitter about it as we are in that group of people who have never got a penny from the state - do not fall into any group that is ever helped by the budget The council tax has gone up and life is a struggle Please do think long and hard before making things worse for the little people who do not have choice as we can not pay for it

Yours faithfully

Christine Harrison
