Re BBC.

We strongly object to using the license money to pay Tracey Emin for sculpture & also for paying criminals for being on T.V. We strongly object to criminals receiving any kind of reward for their offences. There is too much money wasted.

We prefer no strong language to be used at any time, are they short of vocabulary? Also no explicit sex, there is absolutely no need for it. Old films show how really excellent viewing can be achieved by no foul language or continual sex. By old films we do not want a continuous line up of repeats either. IT IS JUST NOT GOOD ENOUGH !!

We would prefer less children's programmes, much less game academy style, more educational, quizzes, dramas, history & geographical features.

We are over 65 yrs on a very limited budget & watch more T.V. than we care to admit. We do enjoy wildlife, Timewatch, Countryfile & David & Pascoe (also John Thaw & David Jason from ITV),

Alas, I have begun making a rug and my husband resorts to woodwork but what of the money we pay yearly for good viewing??
