Dear BBC, In answer to your advertisement in the press asking for the public to 'have their say' about what is shown and heard. I both watch television - and listen to the radio and, like a lot of people I tend to have the radio on during the day and watch t.v in the evening. I have no quarrel with the BBC / radio broadcasts, finding it excellent in setting out arguments, giving information (such as the Money Programme - MoneyBox) - and of course - the Archers. Television, is another matter. Please, can we have less of constant repeats of very old soaps, comedies etc.

• Surely the BBC has a vast stock of old films (it does not matter how old) that they can show, especially at the weekends. If they do put any on - it is always after 11pm, and they are not all violent films. Not everyone wants to record them. More films around 4pm (especially on a Sunday) please! 'Real Story' is excellent - more like this would be good, up to date and informative presentation. I do not watch sport, but realise that it is popular and can run over. Is it possible to run 'a strip' bottom screen telling viewers that their next show is late - or cancelled? Preferably left on for long enough to see it! Needless to say, more Wildlife

Programmes - with Bill Oddie and team
and more Come Dancing type shows.
Less obsession (it seems to me) with what Hitler did and war programmes, showing the same footage. I think that people want to move on and forget it.

I hope that my comments are of use and that you get plenty of feedback — and act on it.

Yours sincerely,

Nancy Jaye.
