Dear Sirs,

Since we are all rethinking the structure of the BBC, I would like to contribute my views on this subject.

The BBC has deteriorated disastrously over the years I have listened and viewed from the 1950's. Once, you could rely on the correctness of BBC English - including pronunciation and accents - ie, neutral, clear and cultivated. Now you can only hear people with flawed vowels and dropped consonants, and vulgarity with swearing. Slurring of words is common. Speech is hardly intelligible.

Politically the BBC has 100% Labour voters. This is a disgrace - the workers should be fairly spaced over all legal parties. The views propagated are of course skewed badly and what you get is relentless leftwing propaganda. Unfortunately, since the days when people in the BBC were mourning the death of Stalin - we have not progressed one bit.

The BBC seems to have too many women working in various sections, and is very inflexible in its outlook.

Finally the programs - these have all been dumbed down and are at a very low level.

I think the BBC is a vile organization and needs a complete overhaul.

Yours faithfully,

Dr. I. S. Kiss
