Dear Sir/Madam.

I am writing to say how much I hate having to pay for a licence to watch the T.V. I have complained on several occasions about The Jet Set LIFE STYLE. Which the fee pays for.

Now we have the National lottery: Come and have a go with a first prize of £50,000.

Both these programmes are using my licence fee to pay for, which I object most strongly to. Now on BBC 2 Monday - Friday this week, from 6am to 10.30 every programme is a repeat.

I would rather watch 3 minutes of adverts every hour, than having to pay for a licence. The BBC says it does not advertise, but we have the holiday programme which sends presenters all over the world. Then we are told which company they went with, and the cost.

Also Top Gear advertising for a car maker. Plus there is far too much sport. OK for those who enjoy sport. What about us who don't.

Daily Mail 14-12-02 TV LICENCE could be scrapped. The BBC licence fee could be scrapped as part of a review ordered by Gordon Brown. Whitehall sources said the Government was not opposed to scrapping the licence fee. But would only do so if a suitable alternative could be found.

my answer adverts.

Yours Respectfully
Janet Leeks.
