Dear Sir,
you want our opinions, so here goes.

Having spent seven years in the Royal Navy from 1948 to 1956, I am familiar with every swear word ever invented, but no swearing takes place in my house.

But you have decided that we must listen to foul mouthed Billy Connolly, who while quite interesting, has to use the 'f' word constantly. Last night's show I'm afraid, I used the off button.

My second complaint, and it applies to all channels, is the constant drumming that takes place in virtually all programmes.

(2) Sometimes it is so loud it drowns out the person speaking, and it is extremely irritating.

Every evening I 'tick off' what I think is worth watching, and then hand it to my wife for approval or rejection.

I am afraid lately the 'ticks' are getting fewer and fewer.

yours faithfully.

S. John Leshie.
