

Dear Sir

I noticed in The Sun your request for opinions on your service. First let me say my wife and I are in our 80's so we are lucky that we do not have to pay for a licence. Then again we have never been a great follower of BBC and very little still now, so we are please having not to pay.
Too much Pop Noise. Sorry I do not call it music too many repeats, and films on to late, if they are any good which we are sorry to say not many are these days, give us the old ones.
But going back years ago you did put some Operas on two and we remember classical concert and I did tape some of them at the time but sadly they have worn out, I remember Tawana with us further also with Tolboy and Overhere from Rossum. I am sure these could be still in your archives, or a particular show we watch so Song of Prarie on Sundays.

I am sorry I could not come up with much to help but not having to pay for your service now I cannot expect too much.

By the way there is too much football on TV, I'm afraid people in this country think that it is one and all now, don't get me wrong I like sport and always played but to put it on in the main. Viewing hours is a bit much.

Yours Sincerely,
A. J. Reynolds
