

Real Help for Communities:
Volunteers, Charities and Social Enterprises

Real help now

Office of the Third Sector

- In Cabinet Office – created in May 2006
- Minister for the Third Sector, Kevin Brennan, & Minister for the Cabinet Office, Liam Byrne

Our overarching aim is to:

Develop and support an environment which enables the third sector to thrive, growing it's contribution to Britain's society, economy and environment

Context

- Third Sector is facing increasing demand for services at the same time as decreasing income
- Government is acting to provide real help now so the third sector can deliver the extra help that people need, when and where they need it
- The Office of the Third Sector worked closely with third sector organisations to produce a package of support that will help organisations meet the needs of individuals and communities

Why is this important the to North East?

- 4,698 general charities (2005/06, NCVO Almanac 2008)
- 140 000 volunteers providing 29 million volunteer hours
- 20% people formally volunteer at least once a month and 33% people formally volunteer at least once in last 12 months (2005 Citizenship Survey)
- 23,000 people employed in the third sector in 2005 (UK Voluntary Sector Workforce Almanac, 2007)

5 Principles of Real Help for Communities

- Helps achieve economic growth, equality and social mobility
- Delivers real help now and in the future for individuals, families and communities
- Ensures as many resources as possible are directed into frontline services
- Encourages third sector organisations to work together to provide help now & in the future
- Provides a rapid response to current and emerging needs

Key Measures
