Dear Sir

When I was a Social Worker in the East End for nearly 24 years I worked with a large number of people who were harmed by alcohol. If more people were aware of the option and advantages of a healthy and safe alcohol-free lifestyle, I am sure that more people would choose it.

The Government should launch a massive campaign highlighting this positive choice.

At the age of 58 I have now greatly enjoyed an alcohol-free lifestyle for 45 years. I last drank alcohol when I was 13 and I have had a lot of fun since then - as I said on Kilroy yesterday. I have experienced many benefits and I am convinced that more people would decide to live without alcohol if they were made aware that this is an option they could choose which has many advantages.

The more people who opt for an alcohol-free lifestyle, the fewer alcohol problems there will be.

Yours truly
