

Subject: Wraight, David

Hello

Just a quick note to add my four penneth to the debate about the BBC online curriculum.

Having worked extensively in a variety of Primary and secondary schools over the last 18 months working with teachers on their NOF ICT training, I just hope that the BBC will fund support for teachers to use such curriculum content. I find a very large number of the teachers with whom I work have little knowledge of the current BBC site and the excellent resources which it has online.

The other major problem is the speed of access to the materials - broadband at a fast speed needs to be made available now.

The amount of money that has been wasted on the planning for the New National stadium ( I do support a new Stadium but not at Wembley!) would have funded a large chunk of training while a good training organisation such as the one for which I work would empower teachers to use such sites in a much more adventurous way and advance the effective teaching and learning which is being developed.

Dave Wraight
Professional Tutor
Cambridge Education Associates

The views represented on this email are those of the individual.