

I am grateful for the sympathetic audience which you have given to those making representations concerning the licensing of Christian radio stations within the UK.

For me, the strength of Britain has been founded upon strong Christian principles. These in the past gave rise to legislation which was internationally renowned and a high international reputation for justice in Britain.

It would be a great shame if that were to disappear as the result of some misguided desire for a kind of political correctness.

I hope you will find it possible to influence matters so that there may again be freedom for Christians to express the wonder of God's love for a troubled world through the media.

I was told only last week that members the police force believe that it is more acceptable to propagate Islam than Christianity in central London! Can this be good?

Thank you.
