

I am writing to express my concern about proposals to allow product placement in television programmes. I believe that this will have a negative effect on the quality of programmes because the prospect of receiving money from particular companies is likely to influence the way programmes are written. The UK has a tradition of high quality television programmes, with relatively little advertising compared to some other countries. I believe these proposals will undermine this tradition.

Joanna Griffiths