

BYRON CONSULTATION – DRAFT PARAGRAPHS AND KEY QUESTIONS

To:
Video Games Classification
Department for Culture, Media and Sport

Video Games Classification: A consultation response by Zenimax Europe Ltd.

Zenimax Europe Ltd. are the European arm of Zenimax Media Inc, the American based video game publisher responsible for among others, the Elder Scrolls and Fallout franchises.

We are a member of ELSPA and we fully support the submission that they are making to this consultation in favour of Option 3. We agree that the UK should now adopt PEGI and PEGI Online as the single age rating system for games.

As games are increasingly available and played online, the UK should take the opportunity to update and future-proof its age rating system. A UK-only rating is out of step with what is happening elsewhere in Europe. PEGI and PEGI Online provide pan-European coverage and represent a safe, successful and strong system for classifying age-related content.

Over recent months PEGI has undergone further significant improvements which clarify the ratings and make it easier for parents and children to understand game content. We believe these improvements add to the protection PEGI offers to children playing online. PEGI is also "future-proof", since it has the flexibility, scalability and efficiency to allow it to cope with enormous increases in online gaming that the industry expects to see in coming years.

PEGI also delivers better understanding of the game-playing experience and the ratings challenges this presents. Finally, from the perspective of my business, PEGI's widespread coverage and acceptance offers greater opportunities for us to publish high quality games across the large European market.

We agree with the detailed arguments contained in the ELSPA submission and would urge the DCMS to support its recommendation to adopt PEGI and PEGI Online as the single age rating system for games.

Yours faithfully
