Chapter 1: Introduction

As at 31 March 2009, DCMS was responsible for 55 public bodies that help to deliver the department's strategic aim and objectives. These comprise: four public corporations, two public broadcasting authorities, one executive agency (The Royal Parks), 46 non-departmental public bodies (35 Executive NDPBs, 10 advisory NDPBs and one tribunal NDPB), plus two unclassified bodies who receive Exchequer funding (Royal Household and Churches Conservation Trust). NDPBs fall into three categories: executive, advisory and tribunal. Over 95 per cent of the DCMS's expenditure is channelled through these bodies.

The relationship between DCMS and its public bodies is a balance between independence and accountability. On the one hand, public bodies perform functions best carried out at arms length from government. For example, some are regulators, and must be seen to be independent of political interests. Others need specialised expertise not found in general public administration.

On the other hand, public bodies spend public money, from the Exchequer or from the National Lottery, and are therefore accountable to the public, Ministers and Parliament. While they should have a large measure of freedom to determine how they operate, they need to do so within the framework of policies and priorities developed by the sponsor department and agreed by Parliament.

That framework is encapsulated in the following key documents, one or more of which apply to most of our bodies:

- Departmental Strategic Objectives (DSOs) and Public Service Agreements (PSAs) set the broad objectives for the Department.
- The Funding Agreement explains what each body will deliver for the public funding allocated to it, why that is relevant (including any tie in with DCMS DSOs and/or PSAs), and the broad strategy and key activities that will deliver the outputs. The Agreement is signed by an appropriately senior member of the body and a DCMS Minister or senior official.
- The management statement and financial memorandum sets out the rules and guidelines that a public body should observe in carrying out its functions; it is reviewed periodically, but the content remains fairly constant.
- In the case of the National Lottery distributing bodies, policy and financial directions and a statement of financial requirements set out rules on the treatment of Lottery proceeds, particularly where this differs from the treatment of Exchequer funds.

All the public corporations, public broadcasting authorities and executive NDPBs are required to produce annual reports and accounts⁷⁸ that are either presented to Parliament or placed in the Library of the House of Commons.

We share responsibility with the Department for Business, Innovation and Skills (BIS) for Ofcom (a public corporation) and the Design Council (an executive NDPB). Further information on these bodies can be found on the BIS website (<http://www.bis.gov.uk>).

Chapter 2: Key To Directory Fields

Classification and Key Details of Public Bodies

Public Body Classification

A public body is not part of a government department, but carries out its function to a greater or lesser extent at arm's length from central government. For this reason non-Ministerial departments and executive agencies are excluded from this directory, as they are departments or part of one.

Ministers are ultimately responsible to Parliament for the activities of the bodies sponsored by their department and in almost all cases (except, for example, where there is separate statutory provision) ministers make the appointments to their boards. Departments are responsible for funding and ensuring good governance of their public bodies.

The term 'public body' is a general one which includes: Non-Departmental Public Bodies (NDPBs); Public Corporations; and Public Broadcasting Authorities.

Non-Departmental Public Bodies (NDPBs)

There are a number of types of NDPB. These denote different funding arrangements, functions and kinds of activity. They include:

Executive NDPBs - established in statute and carrying out administrative, regulatory and commercial functions, they employ their own staff and are allocated their own budgets.

Advisory NDPBs - provide independent and expert advice to ministers on particular topics of interest. They do not usually have staff but are supported by staff from their sponsoring department. They do not usually have their own budget, as costs incurred come within the department's expenditure.

Tribunal NDPBs - have jurisdiction in a specialised field of law. They are usually supported by staff from their sponsoring department and do not have their own budgets.

Public Corporations

Public Corporations are market bodies that derive more than 50% of their income from the sale of goods and services. Some charge for regulatory activities where these provide a significant benefit to the person paying the fee. They are owned or controlled by central government. They have substantial day to day operating independence so that they should be seen as institutional units separate from their sponsor departments. Otherwise they may have similar features to Executive NDPBs as detailed above.

Public Broadcasting Authorities

The term Public Broadcasting Authority is a unique public body category currently encompassing the British Broadcasting Corporation (BBC) and S4C (Sianel Pedwar Cymru, the Welsh Fourth Channel Authority).

The BBC is governed by Royal Charter and an associated Agreement with Government. These arrangements reflect the Corporation's independent status and its unique accountability directly to the licence fee payer. The Charter and Agreement set out the BBC's accountability to Parliament for use of the public money it receives whilst at the same time preserving the BBC's independence on editorial policy and programming.

S4C is a statutory corporation. Its governance arrangements and functions are set out in the Broadcasting Acts of 1990 and 1996 and the Communications Act 2003. S4C's Chair and members are appointed by the Secretary of State and the Authority is responsible for S4C's strategic policy and for ensuring the fulfilment of its statutory functions. S4C is funded primarily by a Government grant, the level of which is prescribed by statute.

Shows the full-time equivalent number of employees (rounded to the nearest whole number) as at 31 March of the reporting year. This figure does not include staff of the parent department providing a secretariat for executive bodies but does include civil servants temporarily seconded into the body itself, and paid for from the body's funds. BUT for Advisory NDPBs which generally do not employ their own staff the figure shown is the number of WTE (Whole Time Equivalent) secretariat staff supplied by the parent department, where identifiable.

Regional Cultural Consortiums

On 2 July 2008 DCMS announced changes to the way we are organised within the English regions. The four DCMS bodies which have the most significant regional presence (Arts Council England, Sport England, English Heritage and the Museums, Libraries and Archives Council) were asked to work more closely together where joint action is needed. Working with key partners, such as local authorities and the Regional Development Agencies, they agreed shared priorities and an action plan for each region, and identified a director to lead in each region. With this all in place, the eight Regional Cultural Consortiums were wound up during 2008-09.
