

GEFFRYE MUSEUM TRUST

The Secretary of State has reappointed Margaret Casely-Hayford as a Trustee of the Geffrye Museum for a period of four years from 1st January 2004.

Biographical Note

Margaret Casely-Hayford is a Solicitor of the Supreme Court of England and Wales, a partner in the Denton Wilde Sapte law firm specialising in planning and public law. She is a Committee Member of the Leisure Property Forum, a Special Trustee of the Great Ormond Street Hospital and a freelance contributor to Building Design Magazine.

Note to Editors

The Geffrye Museum in Shoreditch, East London, is the only museum in the UK to specialise in the history of English domestic interiors, displaying a collection of English furniture and decorative arts from 1600 to the 1990s. The items are displayed in a series of period room settings which are housed in former almshouses, built in 1715, which are themselves Grade 1 listed buildings.

Trustees of the Geffrye Museum are not remunerated.

Margaret has had no significant political activity in the last five years.
