Budget 2005

Investing for our future:

Fairness and opportunity for Britain's hard-working families

The Government's economic objective is to build a strong economy and a fair society, with opportunity and security for all. The Budget sets out how the Government is working to achieve this goal, building on a platform of stability and growth to ensure that the North West can meet the challenges and rise to the opportunities of the rapidly evolving global economy.

Maintaining a stable economy

Following downturns in many major economies, the world economy strengthened in 2004 and in the early part of this year, though a number of global economic risks remain. The Government's economic reforms have helped the UK to maintain macroeconomic stability and continue to grow throughout this challenging period for the global economy. The Budget projections show that:

- the economy is expected to grow by 3 to 3½ per cent in 2005, as forecast in Budget 2003 and Budget 2004;
- inflation is set to remain low and close to the Government's target; and
- the public finances remain sound and the Government is on track to meet its fiscal rules, borrowing is forecast to be £34 billion in 2004-05 and debt lower than the US, Japan, Italy, France and Germany.

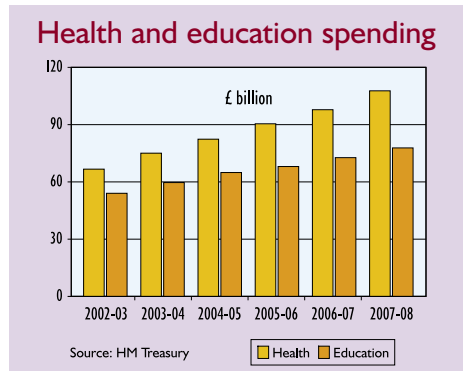

High quality public services

The Government is committed to providing new investment in Britain's public services. Spending on public services will be £62 billion higher by 2007-08 compared with 2004-05. Around 75 per cent of this increase will go on the Government's priorities of health, social services, education, transport, housing and the fight against crime.

To reflect the high priority the Government attaches to education and skills, the Budget announces a long-term programme of investment to deliver twenty-first century facilities in primary schools, along with further support for ITC in schools, funding to help schools deliver extended services, significant investment in further education and measures to ensure every 16 to 18 year old has access to education and training.

From 2009, over half of primary schools will be rebuilt or refurbished, with most schools benefiting from additional facilities such as parents' centres or basic healthcare units that will be accessible to all. This will support recent progress in raising educational standards and achievement and ensure that new challenges can be addressed over the coming years, and every family will have access to a range of activities and services through a local primary school.

The Government is determined to secure value of money for the taxpayer and has sets out plans for public service efficiency savings of over £20 billion by 2007-08, including through a reduction of more than 80,000 civil service posts. This will release resources for front line services. The Budget:

- describes progress on departmental efficiency plans, including £2 billion of savings announced since the 2004 Pre-Budget Report and a total of over 4,300 jobs moving out of London and the South East by the end of 2004-05; and
- announces that to meet the costs of the military operations in Iraq and the UK's other international obligations, an additional £340 million will be made available in 2004-05 and £400 million will be made available in 2005-06.

Regional policy

The Government has made significant progress towards establishing the framework for a modern regional policy designed to strengthen regional productivity and employment and reduce regional disparities. The Government is committed to make sustainable improvements in the economic performance of all English regions and, over the long term, reduce the persistent gap in growth rates between the regions.

The Government believes that it is not possible to run economic policy or deliver strong public services that meet public needs from the centre using a one-size-fits-all solution. Instead the Government has established Regional Development Agencies (RDAs) to drive economic growth in each region, with the freedom and flexibility to respond to the region's particular challenges and opportunities. The North West Development Agency (NWDA), established in 1999, is the key strategic leader of economic development in the North West. Since its creation, NWDA, along with the other RDAs, has helped promote employment, entrepreneurship, innovation, skills and regeneration in the region. In recognition of the regional perspective in policy-making the RDAs contributed to the development of Budget 2005 by responding to a number of the key policy areas highlighted above.

In addition, the Budget announced the emerging proposals of the Review of Government Offices which aims to create a more focused and strategic role for the Government Office in each region in working with local authorities and local partners to improve performance. The Government Office for the North West represents central government in the region.

Productivity and enterprise in a flexible economy

Britain has high employment levels but the amount of output produced per worker – productivity – has historically been lower than in other major economies, though Britain's relative performance has been improving in recent years. An enterprising, innovative and high-skilled economy will help deliver faster productivity growth and ensure the UK is well-placed to prosper in the global economy. However, there are significant regional differences in productivity. In 2003, Gross Value Added (GVA) per capita in the North West was 10% below the UK average. Budget 2005 announces new measures to help improve productivity in the North West, by boosting skills, science and enterprise. Budget announcements include:

- reforms to reduce the regulatory burden on enterprise, including implementing the recommendations of the Hampton Review for a new risk-based approach to inspection and enforcement, streamlining regulatory structures and increasing accountability; and new targets for reducing the administrative burden of Government regulation;
- improved support for enterprise in deprived areas, by replacing relief on commercial property purchases in disadvantaged areas with a new, better targeted Local Enterprise Growth Initiative;

- steps to implement the ten-year Science and Innovation Investment Framework, including new partnerships to boost stem cell and energy research;
- to support the development of skills in young people, a pilot scheme to enhance training opportunities for 16 and 17 year olds;
- welcomes the RDA publication of High Growth Business Coaching, which sets out how it will develop and deliver focused coaching for new and existing businesses with high growth prospects and high-potential entrepreneurs in the pre-start-up phase in each region; and
- An additional £65 million for Employer Training Pilots in 2005-6 to ensure that the pilots are funded to meet employer demand, until the rollout of the national programme.

Employment opportunity for all

The Government's long-term goal is employment opportunity for all. It aims to promote a dynamic and flexible labour market which can react efficiently to changing economic circumstances and in which everyone has the opportunity to fulfill their potential.

Since 1997, the New Deal has helped over 155,000 people into jobs in the North West, and helped to provide greater employment opportunity for people who find it harder to obtain jobs, such as lone parents and people with a health condition or disability. The number of people in work in the North West has risen by 8.5% in that time and unemployment in the region has fallen by 31.1% in that time.

The Government has introduced reforms to improve work incentives and provide support for those on low incomes. Introduced in April 2003, the Working Tax Credit helps to make work pay for people on low incomes. By December 2004, it was benefiting over 320,000 working households in the North West. Together with the National Minimum Wage, which from October 2005 will cover 160,000 jobs in the North West, the Working Tax Credit helps to deliver a more flexible labour market, while ensuring that workers are protected against falls in income. The Government is now taking further steps to deliver higher employment across the North West, by:

- providing extra support for people on incapacity benefits who want to return to work and exploring more efficient and effective sanctions to ensure that job seekers meet their responsibility to look for work; and
- accepting the recommendations set out by the National Employment Panel in its report on raising ethnic minority employment.

Building a fairer society

The Government's aim is to build a fairer society in which everyone can contribute to and share in rising national prosperity. A flexible and dynamic economy must go hand-in-hand with a fairer society so that everyone has the chance to fulfil their potential. The Government is committed to tackling child and pensioner poverty, providing support for families with children and ensuring security for all in old age. It is also creating a modern and fair tax system which raises sufficient revenue for public services and ensures that everyone pays their fair share of tax. Budget 2005 announces:

- a commitment to increase the child element of the Child Tax Credit at least in line with average earnings up to and including 2007-8, benefiting over 285,000 working families in the region;
- improved financial support for 16 to 19 year olds in learning, through extending Child Benefit and the Child Tax Credit from April 2006; and pilots a new Activity Agreement and Allowance for 16-17 year olds not in education, employment or training;
- free local bus travel for people over the age of 60 and disabled people from April 2006, benefiting over 1.3 million individuals in the region, and an additional payment guaranteeing council tax paying households with someone over 65 will receive £200 towards the cost of council tax alongside the 2005 Winter Fuel Payment;
- a doubling of the starting threshold of stamp duty on all residential property to £120,000;

- introduces further reforms to modernise the tax system, including changes to the way oil companies pay tax; and a number of measures to clamp down on tax fraud and avoidance; and
- an increase in duties on tobacco, beer and wine in line with inflation, and a freeze in the duty on spirits and cider.

Protecting the environment

The Government believes that economic prosperity must be achieved while protecting the environment to ensure a better quality of life for current and future generations. It is committed to tackling global problems, such as climate change, and to improving the local environment in the UK's towns, cities and rural areas. The Government is also committed to promoting an efficient and environmentally sustainable transport system. Budget 2005 announces:

- further action on climate change, including new fiscal incentives, an energy services summit and a new energy efficiency theme as part of the Government's Invest to Save budget;
- an increase, in line with inflation, of fuel duty rates, from 1 September 2005, alongside an increase in duty on rebated oils to reduce fraud; and the standard £5 increase in Vehicle Excise Duty for larger and more polluting cars, with the rate for smaller cars frozen;
- a freeze in the threshold for the minimum percentage charge rate of company car tax, and simplifications to the company car tax system; and
- a freeze in the climate change levy, the aggregates levy and air passenger duty.

Household income

- Compared with last year, a single earner couple with two children, with earnings up to the median for full time workers - £23,400 per year - will be at least £150 a year better off in real terms.
- As a result of personal tax and benefit measures introduced since 1997, by October 2005, households in the North West will be, on average, £1,020 a year better off in real terms.

Where taxpayers' money is spent

Total public spending is expected to be around £519 billion in 2005-06, around £8,700 for every man, woman and child in the UK. It is set to rise to £549 billion in 2006-07 and to £580 billion in 2007-08.
