19	a) No paid external employment or expenses covered by third parties. Paid external employment can lead to a conflict of interest and a distraction from the business of parliament and constituency. The idea that an MP needs a paid external position to give them 'real world' experience is untenable. Constituents, advisers, other MP's, committees and charities are just some of the avenues which may be used. b) Any MP should anyway have some life experience before representing the public and minimum age requirements should be considered. c) Parliament pay subject to exactly the same taxation rules as everybody else. The ability to 'Flip' a main residence results from a tax law specifically available only to MP's put in place by MP's. d) In general terms and conditions of employment to be commensurate with private sector. We must move away from the arrogant sense of entitlement present in both Houses of P.
