Whole text is already readable.
This leaflet summarises the rights of both pregnant employees and their employers and their responsibilities towards each other.

It sets out the key things you must do if your employee tells you she is pregnant, child birth or maternity leave. It also tells you where to look for information that your employer can find out what they need to know.

At the back of this leaflet is another for you to give to your employee as a reminder of her rights and responsibilities during pregnancy.

This leaflet summarises the rights of both pregnant employees and their employers and their responsibilities to each other.

It sets out the key things you must do if your employee tells you she is pregnant, child birth or maternity leave. It also tells you where to look for information that your employer can find out what they need to know.

At the back of this leaflet is another for you to give to your employee as a reminder of her rights and responsibilities during pregnancy.

Talking to your employer about your plans from an early stage will help you both, so the leaflet also sets out what you should do or think about to help you both manage your pregnancy, maternity leave and pay return to work.

There is information at the end of this leaflet about where to look for more detailed and who to contact for advice. It tells you where to look for information about managing your employer's maternity leave and other benefits to support your working life and family responsibilities and their employers, such as paternity leave and the right to ask for time off for ante-natal appointments, maternity leave and the right not to be treated unfairly because of your pregnancy, childbirth or maternity leave. It also tells you where to look for information about managing your employer's maternity leave and other benefits to support your working life and family responsibilities and their employers, such as paternity leave and the right to ask for time off for ante-natal appointments, maternity leave and the right not to be treated unfairly because of your pregnancy, childbirth or maternity leave.

This leaflet summarises the rights of both pregnant employees and their employers and their responsibilities towards each other. It sets out the key things you must do if your employee tells you she is pregnant, child birth or maternity leave. It also tells you where to look for information that your employer can find out what they need to know.

At the back of this leaflet is another for you to give to your employee as a reminder of her rights and responsibilities during pregnancy.

Talking to your employer about your plans from an early stage will help you both, so the leaflet also sets out what you should do or think about to help you both manage your pregnancy, maternity leave and pay return to work.

There is information at the end of this leaflet about where to look for more detailed and who to contact for advice. It tells you where to look for information about managing your employer's maternity leave and other benefits to support your working life and family responsibilities and their employers, such as paternity leave and the right to ask for time off for ante-natal appointments, maternity leave and the right not to be treated unfairly because of your pregnancy, childbirth or maternity leave. It also tells you where to look for information about managing your employer's maternity leave and other benefits to support your working life and family responsibilities and their employers, such as paternity leave and the right to ask for time off for ante-natal appointments, maternity leave and the right not to be treated unfairly because of your pregnancy, childbirth or maternity leave.

This leaflet summarises the rights of both pregnant employees and their employers and their responsibilities towards each other. It sets out the key things you must do if your employee tells you she is pregnant, child birth or maternity leave. It also tells you where to look for information that your employer can find out what they need to know.

At the back of this leaflet is another for you to give to your employee as a reminder of her rights and responsibilities during pregnancy.

Talking to your employer about your plans from an early stage will help you both, so the leaflet also sets out what you should do or think about to help you both manage your pregnancy, maternity leave and pay return to work.

There is information at the end of this leaflet about where to look for more detailed and who to contact for advice. It tells you where to look for information about managing your employer's maternity leave and other benefits to support your working life and family responsibilities and their employers, such as paternity leave and the right to ask for time off for ante-natal appointments, maternity leave and the right not to be treated unfairly because of your pregnancy, childbirth or maternity leave. It also tells you where to look for information about managing your employer's maternity leave and other benefits to support your working life and family responsibilities and their employers, such as paternity leave and the right to ask for time off for ante-natal appointments, maternity leave and the right not to be treated unfairly because of your pregnancy, childbirth or maternity leave.

This leaflet summarises the rights of both pregnant employees and their employers and their responsibilities towards each other. It sets out the key things you must do if your employee tells you she is pregnant, child birth or maternity leave. It also tells you where to look for information that your employer can find out what they need to know.

At the back of this leaflet is another for you to give to your employee as a reminder of her rights and responsibilities during pregnancy.

Talking to your employer about your plans from an early stage will help you both, so the leaflet also sets out what you should do or think about to help you both manage your pregnancy, maternity leave and pay return to work.

There is information at the end of this leaflet about where to look for more detailed and who to contact for advice. It tells you where to look for information about managing your employer's maternity leave and other benefits to support your working life and family responsibilities and their employers, such as paternity leave and the right to ask for time off for ante-natal appointments, maternity leave and the right not to be treated unfairly because of your pregnancy, childbirth or maternity leave. It also tells you where to look for information about managing your employer's maternity leave and other benefits to support your working life and family responsibilities and their employers, such as paternity leave and the right to ask for time off for ante-natal appointments, maternity leave and the right not to be treated unfairly because of your pregnancy, childbirth or maternity leave.
As soon as you know you are pregnant

What to do

You should think about when to tell your employer you are pregnant – the laws which protect you at work only apply once your employer knows you are pregnant. Read this leaflet to find out your key rights and responsibilities and where to find out more. Giving your employer the employer’s part will help make sure you both have the information you need and help you discuss and make plans together, eg

- Protecting your own and your baby’s health and safety while you are pregnant and when you return to work.
- Working out when you are going to start your maternity leave
- Working out when you will take any annual leave which may need to be used up before your maternity leave
- Finding out if you are entitled to anything extra from your employer

Your partner may be able to take up to two weeks’ paid paternity leave once the baby is born. Your partner should find out more about this now. If they do not give the correct notice they could lose the right to take paternity leave.

Why

Once your employer knows you are pregnant:

- Your employer must conduct a risk assessment and remove risks or make alternative arrangements to protect your safety, and your baby’s safety, when you are at work.
- You are entitled to reasonable paid time off to attend ante-natal appointments and classes which are advised by your midwife or medical practitioner. Your employer can ask for evidence of your appointments from the second appointment onwards.
- You are protected from unfair treatment, including dismissal, connected with your pregnancy. Your employer must do what is set out in this leaflet. Some employers also offer extra benefits, eg extra maternity pay on top of what you are entitled to under the law.

If you are off work with a pregnancy related illness your employer must pay you in the same way as for any other type of illness. But if there are disciplinary rules related to sick leave in your workplace pregnancy-related illness must be excluded. You must not be treated unfairly because of any pregnancy related illness.
By the 15th week before the week your baby is due
(this means you will be around 25 weeks pregnant)

What to do

You must:

• Tell your employer you are pregnant (if you haven’t already).
• Tell your employer when you want your maternity leave and pay to start. This can be any time from 11 weeks before the week your baby is due (but if you are off work because of your pregnancy in the 4 weeks before the week your baby is due your employer may start your maternity leave and pay).
• Give this notice in writing if your employer asks you to. (You may want to do this anyway – there is a standard letter to help if you wish).
• Give your employer the maternity certificate (form MATB1) which your midwife will give you from the 21st week of your pregnancy. This confirms when your baby is due.

You can change your mind about the date you start your maternity leave but you must give your employer 28 days’ notice of the change.

If you aren’t planning to take your full maternity leave you must let your employer know when you will be coming back. You can change your mind later on as long as you give 8 weeks’ notice.

Why

You must give the correct notice so you can take maternity leave and receive Statutory Maternity Pay (SMP). Your employer must write to you within 28 days of your notice about your maternity leave to confirm when you are due back at work. If your employer doesn’t do this you will be entitled to change your mind and return then without giving you notice. Unless you have a good reason, if you do not give your employer at least 28 days notice of when you want SMP to start, your employer can refuse to pay you.

You are entitled to take up to 52 weeks’ maternity leave. You aren’t allowed to work for the first two weeks after the birth (or the first four weeks if you work in a factory). During your 52 weeks’ maternity leave your employer must continue to give you any contractual benefits you would normally receive if you were at work (for example gym membership). You continue to be an employee throughout your whole 52 weeks of maternity leave.

To get SMP you must have been employed continuously by your employer for at least 26 weeks into the 15th week before the week baby is due and earn on average at least enough to be relevant for National Insurance purposes. SMP is paid
By the 15th week before your baby is due notice of the change. If you change your mind to come back later, you must give 8 weeks’ notice before the original earlier date.
(continued)

Your partner must tell their employer by the 15th week before the week the baby is due if they want to take paternity leave.

Your partner must give the correct notice to take paternity leave. If not he may lose the leave. This means he must tell his employer that he wants to take paternity leave, how much leave he wants to take and when he wants to take it by the 15th week before the baby is due).

If your partner gives the notice too late they may lose their right to take the leave. There is a standard form, SC3, to help on the directgov website.

for up to 39 weeks. You get 90% of your average earnings for the first six weeks and then a flat rate for the rest of the time or the 90% rate if that is less than the flat rate. Tax and National Insurance are payable on SMP. Your employer must tell you if you don’t qualify by giving you form SMP1. This will help you claim Maternity Allowance (MA) from Jobcentre Plus instead. In Northern Ireland you can take it to your local Jobs & Benefits Office. MA is paid for 39 weeks at a flat rate or a weekly rate equal to 90% of your average earnings, if that is less. To get MA you must be employed or self-employed in any 26 out of the 66 weeks ending the week before week baby is due and earn £30 a week on average.

If your employer contributes to an occupational pension they must continue to make their usual contributions for the whole time you are receiving any SMP or contractual maternity pay.
Before you begin your maternity leave and during your leave

What to do

You should talk to your employer to agree what kind of contact you will have with your workplace during your maternity leave, eg:

- How you will be told about changes happening at work, including job vacancies.
- Would you like an opportunity to work to help you keep in touch, or to attend a particular event or take up a training opportunity? If so you can agree up to ten days of work during your maternity leave.
- If you and your employer agree that you will do some work to help you keep in touch you should discuss the arrangements with your employer. For example, what pay will you receive for the work you do, or what will your hours be?

You and your employer may find it helpful to start talking about these plans early.

Why

You and your employer may make reasonable contact during your maternity leave. Keeping in touch with work can help to make it easier when it is time to go back.

As well as staying in contact with your employer during your maternity leave, if you and your employer both agree you can do up to 10 days’ work during your maternity leave. These are known as ‘Keeping In Touch Days’. They aren’t limited to your usual job – they could be used for training or other events. You may want to use some Keeping in Touch Days to ease your return to work. You cannot work during the first two weeks (four if you work in a factory) after the baby is born.

You and your employer must both agree that you will do these and the arrangements including what you will be doing and how you will be paid. You can’t be required to take up Keeping in Touch Days, it is up to you to choose. Nor does your employer have to offer them to you. Your employer cannot demand that you go into work at any time during your maternity leave period nor can you be penalised for refusing to take up a Keeping in Touch Day.
Before you return to work

What to do

You should plan your return to work with your employer.

If you are still going back on the date you told your employer there is no need to give any more notice.

If you want to change your date of return you must give your employer 8 weeks’ notice of the change.

There are options to help you and your partner to balance caring for your child and work:

- the right to request flexible working
- rights to time off such as parental leave and time off to deal with a family emergency
- financial support from the Government such as tax credits.

You should talk to your employer in good time if you want to try to agree a different working pattern to the one you worked before your maternity leave. With some employers this can be done informally, otherwise there is a set procedure you must follow to make a written request under the right to request flexible working. Your employer may take up to six weeks to reach a decision on a formal request so it is important to plan ahead.

Why

Planning will make your return easier for you and your employer.

If you don’t give enough notice of your new return date your employer may postpone your return until they’ve had 8 weeks’ notice.

If you return to work during or at the end of the first 26 weeks (ordinary maternity leave) you are entitled to the same job on terms and conditions (eg your salary, hours and the seniority of your job) as if you hadn’t been away. If you take additional maternity leave you are entitled to the same job on the same terms and conditions but if your employer cannot give you the exact job back for good reasons, you are entitled to a suitable job at the same level with terms and conditions at least as good as your previous job.

You are entitled to make a request to change to a flexible working pattern. You must follow the correct procedure if you want the law about requesting flexible working to apply. Your employer must seriously consider your request and follow their part of the procedure.

Your employer must carry out a risk assessment to identify risks to you as a breastfeeding mother or to your baby. If there are risks they must do all that is
Before you return to work (continued)

You should let your employer know if you are planning to breastfeed when you return to work and want to be sure of your health and safety protection. If you decide not to return to work you must give your employer at least the amount of notice for leaving your job under your contract. It would help your employer if you let them know as soon as you are sure.

You are required by law to give the right notice if you are resigning but giving longer is helpful. You are still entitled to SMP or MA even if you are not going back to work. Your maternity leave and employment protections continue until the date you give as the end of your employment. This could be the end of your maternity leave if you choose. Your notice period can run during your maternity leave.
If there is a problem

What to do

You should talk to your employer as soon as you can to try to resolve the problem.

You can get free confidential advice from Acas 08457 47 47 47 or, in Northern Ireland the Labour Relations Agency on 028 9032 1442. Think about whether there is other support you can use to help you find a solution. You may need to bring a formal grievance if you cannot resolve the situation.

If you disagree with your employer’s decision about your entitlement to Statutory Maternity Pay and you cannot resolve this with your employer you can ask HMRC for a decision. Phone the HMRC Statutory Payments Disputes Team on 0191 2255221.

There may be other sources of help for you, for example, a Citizens Advice Bureau, or your trade union.

Why

It’s better for you and your employer if you can sort out any problems between yourselves quickly.

You are protected from any unfair treatment connected with your pregnancy, child birth or maternity leave.

If there is a redundancy situation during your maternity leave you are entitled to be offered any suitable alternative vacancy.
When you are ready for more information

There is more information about all these issues, including the rates of maternity and paternity pay and standard letters to help you and your partner give the notice you need to at www.direct.gov.uk/employees.

You can also get free confidential advice on these issues (apart from maternity pay) from the Acas Helpline on 08457 47 47 47 or, in Northern Ireland the Labour Relations Agency on 028 9032 1442.

If you need help about Statutory Maternity Pay phone HMRC Employees helpline on 0845 302 1479. For Maternity Allowance phone Jobcentre Plus on 0800 055 6688 or in Northern Ireland phone 028 9033 6000.

A guide for new and expectant mothers can be downloaded from www.hse.gov.uk/mothers or call HSE info Line on 0845 345 0055.

Disclaimer

This guide has no legal force and cannot cover every point and situation.
Before your employee begins her maternity leave and during her leave

1. You should give your employee a return-to-work visit and talk about the level of work and what the job will entail. If you need to give a longer notice period, you should explain this to your employee.

2. If your employee has worked additional maternity leave, you may want to consider giving her a return-to-work visit or a return-to-work meeting, depending on the circumstances.

3. If you are an employer who is required to provide a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether your employee has a right to have a return-to-work visit or to have one arranged by another person.

4. If your employee requests a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether she has a right to have a return-to-work visit or to have one arranged by another person.

5. If you are an employer who is required to provide a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether your employee has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

6. If your employee requests a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether she has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

7. If you are an employer who is required to provide a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether your employee has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

8. If your employee requests a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether she has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

9. If you are an employer who is required to provide a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether your employee has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

10. If your employee requests a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether she has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

11. If you are an employer who is required to provide a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether your employee has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

12. If your employee requests a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether she has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

13. If you are an employer who is required to provide a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether your employee has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

14. If your employee requests a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether she has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

15. If you are an employer who is required to provide a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether your employee has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

16. If your employee requests a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether she has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

17. If you are an employer who is required to provide a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether your employee has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

18. If your employee requests a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether she has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

19. If you are an employer who is required to provide a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether your employee has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

20. If your employee requests a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether she has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

21. If you are an employer who is required to provide a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether your employee has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

22. If your employee requests a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether she has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

23. If you are an employer who is required to provide a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether your employee has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

24. If your employee requests a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether she has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

25. If you are an employer who is required to provide a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether your employee has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

26. If your employee requests a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether she has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

27. If you are an employer who is required to provide a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether your employee has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

28. If your employee requests a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether she has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

29. If you are an employer who is required to provide a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether your employee has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

30. If your employee requests a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether she has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

31. If you are an employer who is required to provide a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether your employee has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

32. If your employee requests a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether she has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

33. If you are an employer who is required to provide a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether your employee has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

34. If your employee requests a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether she has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

35. If you are an employer who is required to provide a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether your employee has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

36. If your employee requests a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether she has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

37. If you are an employer who is required to provide a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether your employee has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

38. If your employee requests a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether she has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

39. If you are an employer who is required to provide a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether your employee has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

40. If your employee requests a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether she has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

41. If you are an employer who is required to provide a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether your employee has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

42. If your employee requests a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether she has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

43. If you are an employer who is required to provide a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether your employee has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

44. If your employee requests a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether she has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

45. If you are an employer who is required to provide a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether your employee has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

46. If your employee requests a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether she has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

47. If you are an employer who is required to provide a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether your employee has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

48. If your employee requests a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether she has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

49. If you are an employer who is required to provide a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether your employee has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

50. If your employee requests a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether she has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

51. If you are an employer who is required to provide a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether your employee has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

52. If your employee requests a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether she has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

53. If you are an employer who is required to provide a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether your employee has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

54. If your employee requests a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether she has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

55. If you are an employer who is required to provide a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether your employee has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

56. If your employee requests a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether she has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

57. If you are an employer who is required to provide a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether your employee has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

58. If your employee requests a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether she has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

59. If you are an employer who is required to provide a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether your employee has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.

60. If your employee requests a return-to-work visit, you should consider whether she has a right to receive a return-to-work visit or to receive one arranged by another person.