Timeshare - making the right choice

Timeshare means buying the right to spend a set period in a holiday property each year for at least three years.

Many people own timeshares and enjoy using them.

If you buy a timeshare anywhere in the European Economic Area (EEA)*, you will have certain minimum rights to protect you:

- A 10 day cooling off period in which to cancel the contract without penalty
- Timeshare sellers cannot ask for or take a deposit during the cooling off period
- The right to a brochure and a written contract setting out basic information on the timeshare property in your own language

WARNING - What is not covered by Timeshare law:

- Holiday or vacation clubs – where membership is not linked to any rights of occupancy in any particular property or properties
- Some timeshare resales
- Timeshare in floating vessels (eg narrow boats, pleasure boats and houseboats)
- Timeshare lasting for less than three years

Beware of telephone callers who tell you that you have won a prize of a free holiday. The holiday prize may be used to entice you to attend a timeshare/holiday club presentation.

Before you commit yourself

- Don’t part with any money because timeshare sellers cannot ask for or take deposits during the cooling off period
- Get everything in writing and make sure you read and understand it all
- Check whether the company is a member of a reputable trade association with a Code of Practice, such as the Organisation for Timeshare in Europe (OTE) or the Association of British Travel Agents (ABTA)
- Don’t be rushed into signing anything. If you’re unhappy, walk away

What to do if things go wrong

Initially you should contact the Trading Standards Departments who are responsible for enforcing the UK’s timeshare law. You can also get legal advice from Citizen Advice Bureaux or solicitors.

You can find the address and telephone number of your local Trading Standards Department or local Citizen Advice Bureau by visiting
