IT’S NOT TOO LATE FOR A NEW START

LSC urges young people to go back to learning in 2008

Date of issue Tuesday 22\textsuperscript{nd} January 2008
Publication number 493
Embargo until 0.01 on Tuesday 22\textsuperscript{nd} January 2008

New Year diets and gym subscriptions may have already fallen by the wayside, but the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) is today urging young people to stick to their resolutions to get back into learning.

While many may be ignoring New Year resolutions already – the LSC is reminding young people that it’s never too late to return to learning.

Learning something new is among the top ten New Year resolutions that people make and the LSC is urging young people to keep their pledges and enrol in one of the huge range of learning programmes available and make sure they gain the minimum set of qualifications needed to succeed.

Last year, more than 200,000 16 to 18-year-olds were not in education, employment or training and this January there are thousands of programmes available across England to help young people get back into learning. The huge variety of subjects on offer ranges from ‘Art and Design’ and ‘Beauty, Hair and Holistic Therapies’, to ‘Motor Vehicle Technology’. Young people can browse a complete list of courses in their area (and across England) through the online prospectus, available at \url{http://dcsf.gov.uk/prospectus}.
By gaining essential qualifications, young people can increase their earnings potential and also their future employability – recent research from the LSC among employers revealed that nearly half (47 per cent) would not consider employing a school leaver without the minimum set of qualifications - five GCSEs grades A*-C or a vocational qualification at Level 2.

When asked why they would not take on a young person without the minimum set of qualifications, it was found that seven in 10 (72 per cent) employers felt candidates would struggle in their profession or organisation, half (50 per cent) said they would not be ready for the world of work and that having no qualifications showed a lack of focus (44 per cent) and commitment (38 per cent) for some recruiters.

By enrolling in a new learning programme this January, young people will not only increase their employability but could also benefit from Education Maintenance Allowance (EMA) of up to £30, depending on household income.

Ruth Bullen, Director of Young People’s Learning at the Learning and Skills Council, said:

“As a new year begins, many will be keen to make a fresh start. With such a wide range of subjects and types of courses available, there is so much choice for young people, whatever their interests. By continuing in or returning to learning, it can help them to develop their future employability and they could also receive EMA to help remove some of the financial barriers to make it even easier to get on.
“With nearly half of employers saying they require Level 2 qualifications (five GCSEs A*-C or the vocational equivalent) from potential job candidates, the importance of staying on in learning has been highlighted even further. The LSC is urging all young people to take their future in their own hands and gain these essential qualifications.”

Learning and Skills Council
The LSC exists to make England better skilled and more competitive. We are responsible for ensuring the availability of high-quality education and training for everyone. We have a single goal: to improve the skills of England’s young people and adults to world class standards. Our vision is that young people and adults in England have knowledge and skills matching the best in the world and are part of a truly competitive workforce. We work nationally, regionally and locally to deliver this ambition on behalf of learners and employers.

Once enrolled, the student must attend all course sessions and sign an EMA Contract with their school or college. The contract sets out what is expected in terms of attendance, coursework and progress.

14-19 area prospectuses
- 14-19 area prospectuses are an online resource which provide information for young people on all learning courses and programmes available in an area
- The 14-19 area prospectus will be learners’ first choice of information for accessing all 14-19 learning opportunities
- All areas have a prospectus to enable learners to look at prospectuses from other areas of the country there is a national portal at: http://dcsf.gov.uk/prospectus
- From 2008, learners will be able to access information on the Diplomas being delivered in their area, through the local 14-19 area prospectus
- The area prospectuses will empower learners by giving them access to information about all courses from all providers in an area, this is likely to increase participation and engagement
