Summary

This paper describes the results of testing two types of modification to Model WXY to deal with issues raised during the recent consultation on the model. These issues were that:

- a) Some processed foods with particularly high levels of fat, sugar or salt were not categorised as 'high in fat, salt or sugar' foods because of their protein content
- b) The categorisation of nuts and dried fruit did not adequately acknowledge their contribution to a healthy diet

This paper recommends that the following modifications be applied to Model WXY

- a) Modification AP11 i.e. where the total points for A nutrients (energy, saturated fat, total sugars and sodium) are 11 or more then protein scores 0.
- b) Modification .nut where points are scored for nut content in the same way as points are scored for fruit and vegetable content.

However, because Modifications AP11 and .nut counteract one another to some degree, a further modification is also recommended:

- c) Modification FVN i.e. where the total points for fruit, vegetables and nuts are 5 then Modification AP11 does not apply

1. Introduction

During the consultation on the refined nutrient profiling model (Model WXY) a small number of new concerns about the categorisation of individual foods were raised. These were that:

- a) some processed foods with particularly high levels of fat, salt or sugar were not categorised as such because of their protein content
- b) the categorisation of nuts and dried fruit did not adequately acknowledge their contribution to a healthy diet.

This paper describes the testing of modifications to Model WXY that might address these concerns.

2. Modifications for foods high in fat, salt or sugar, and protein

Three types of modification were tested:

- a) Modifications prot3 and prot4 where protein points are capped at 3 and 4 respectively (rather than 5).
- b) Modifications A7, A8, A9, A10, A11 and A12 where if the total points for A nutrients (energy, saturated fat, total sugars and sodium) equals or exceeds 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 or 12 points respectively then all points for C nutrients (protein, fibre and fruit and vegetables) score 0.
- c) Modifications AP7, AP8, AP9, AP10, AP11 and AP12 where if the total points for A nutrients equals or exceeds 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 or 12 points respectively then all points for protein score 0.

For details of the tests used see *Final Report on the further refinement and testing of Model SSCg3d*¹.

Results

Table 1 below summarises the results of Tests A, B and C for these 14 modifications.

H = Healthier, I = Intermediate, U = High in fat, salt or sugar, ↑ = proportion greater than with Model WXY, ↓ = proportion less than with Model WXY,
BCP = Bread, cereals and potatoes; MD = Milk and dairy products; FV = Fruit and vegetables; MFA = Meat, fish and alternatives; FS = Foods high in fat, foods high in sugar; C = composite foods.

Table1 shows that broadly the modifications tested resulted in fewer foods classified as healthier than by Model WXY. The modifications that involved restricting the possibility of scoring points for C nutrients (to those foods which score less than a threshold number of points for A nutrients ('A' modifications)) had a greater effect on the proportion of foods that were classified as healthier than capping the points that can be scored for protein at a lower level ('prot' modifications). The modifications that involved restricting the possibility of scoring points for protein to those foods which score less than a threshold number of A nutrients ('AP' modifications) had an intermediate effect between 'A' modifications and 'prot' modifications.

'A' modifications have a greater potential to change the score a food is awarded than 'prot' modifications. WXYprot3 scores could only differ from WXY scores by 2 points but in theory WXYA scores (whatever the threshold) could differ from WXY scores by 15 points. However in actual fact both Modifications prot3 and prot4 had a greater effect on the categorisation of C test indicator foods than any of the ‘A’ modifications. ‘prot’ modifications had a particularly large effect on the classification of foods from the ‘Meat, fish and alternatives’ group. Even some fish and fish products moved from healthier to intermediate or from intermediate to high in fat, salt or sugar.

Although ‘AP’ modifications have less potential to change the score a food is awarded than ‘A’ modifications, ‘AP’ modifications had almost identical effects to ‘A’ modifications on the reclassification of C test indicator foods: even for foods in the ‘Bread, cereals and potatoes’ group.

Table 2 (attached at annex A) shows the same foods as in Table 4.1 of the Final Report on the further refinement and testing of Model SSCg3d². It shows how each of the foods score with six different modifications (the ‘prot3’ and the ‘prot4’ modifications and the ‘A10’, ‘A11’, ‘AP10’ and ‘AP11’ modifications). Foods which have moved into a different category due to the modification have been highlighted. It shows that in general the modifications had the greatest effect on breads and cereals, meat and fish and fast foods. Products moved from healthier to intermediate or from intermediate to high in fat, salt or sugar. With some ‘A’ modifications products even moved from healthier to high in fat, salt or sugar.

Table 3 provides a summary of the reclassifications from healthier or intermediate to foods high in fat, salt or sugar in Table 2. Modification prot3 had the greatest effect, and Modifications A11 and AP11 the least effect.

Table 3. Summary of reclassifications from healthier or intermediate to high in fat, salt or sugar for the foods in Table 2

Model	Bread and cereals	Meat, fish and alternatives	Fast foods	Total
WXYprot3	3	4	5	14
WXYprot4	0	2	4	7
WXYA10	6	0	4	10
WXYA11	1	0	2	3
WXYAP10	6	0	4	10
WXYAP11	1	0	2	3

Tables 2 and 3 show that most of the modifications, even though they had some desirable effects, in particular moving some fast foods which are high in fat, saturated fat or sodium into the high in fat, salt or sugar category, nevertheless had other consequences in that many breads, cereals, meat, fish and alternatives (such as nuts) were also reclassified.

² <http://www.food.gov.uk/healthiereating/nutlab/nutprof070905>

Tables 1-3 also show that Modification AP11 had only a modest effect on the classification of most foods i.e. it does not present a radical change to Model WXY. It had no effect on C Test indicator foods unlike the 'prot' modifications but it does have an effect on the points scored by some individual fast foods such as Takeaway Double Beef Patty in Sesame Seed Bun (8 points instead of 3 with WXY) and Takeaway cheeseburger (9 points instead of 4). Some fast foods, such as Takeaway Double Beef Patty in Sesame Seed Bun are in consequence re-categorised from intermediate to high in fat, salt or sugar.

Conclusions

The results of the testing described above suggest that capping of protein points at lower than 5 ('prot' modifications') would not be a useful modification. Although it addresses the issue that some processed foods with particularly high levels of fat, salt or sugar are not categorised as such because of their protein content, it also results in other foods, in particular from the 'Meat, fish and alternatives' group being classified as high in fat, salt or sugar.

Modifications that involved restricting the possibility of scoring points for all C nutrients to those foods which score more than a threshold number of points for A nutrients ('A' modifications) appear useful. It would mean that foods where the levels of energy, saturated fat, sugar or sodium are particularly high would not be promoted regardless of their protein, fibre or fruit and vegetable content. However 'A' modifications mean that potentially too many foods, including foods such as dried fruit and high fibre foods from the 'Bread, cereals and potatoes' group would be reclassified as high in fat, salt or sugar, and not just processed foods with high levels of protein.

'AP' modifications that involve restricting the possibility of scoring points for just protein rather than all C nutrients have similar effects on the categorisation of foods to 'A' modifications but since their effects on the scores awarded by the model is less they provide greater scope for reformulation to lead to a more beneficial classification.

A threshold of 11 points for the A nutrients has enough of an impact to affect the re-categorisation of some foods, particularly fast foods, but not too large an effect as to cause the re-categorisation of many breads and breakfast cereals.

We therefore consider that Modification AP11 could usefully be applied to the model.

3. A modification to ensure that the categorisation of nuts acknowledges their contribution to a healthy diet

One type of modification was tested:

- a) Modification .nut where points are scored for nut content in the same way as points are scored for fruit and vegetable content.

In order to implement this modification a clear definition of nuts is required³. Using this definition Modification .nut was tested by examining the change in scores and categorisations produced by this modification to nuts and products containing nuts.

Results

Table 4 shows the results of testing the .nut modification in this way. It shows that the .nut modification does mean that many plain unsalted nuts e.g. walnuts, Brazil nuts, peanuts, pecan nuts, and almonds are re-categorised from high in fat, salt or sugar to healthier or intermediate while salted nuts and products containing nuts do not change their categorisation.

Conclusions

We therefore consider that Modification .nut should be applied to the model.

4. Assessing whether the categorisation of dried fruit acknowledges their contribution to a healthy diet

During the consultation on Model WXY the issue of whether the categorisation of dried fruit by the model did not adequately acknowledge their contribution to a healthy diet was raised. Accordingly the categorisations of a wider range of dried fruit in the databases was examined using Model WXY.

Results

Table 5 shows the results of this testing. It shows that although some dried fruit are categorised as high in fat, salt or sugar by Model WXY, many dried fruits are classified as intermediate or healthier

Conclusions

In light of the distribution of dried fruits across each of the categories, we consider that no further modification to the model is required.

5. Testing modifications in combination

Modifications in combination do not necessarily have additive effects, their effects can be multiplicative or they can cancel one another out, therefore 'prot', 'A' and 'AP' modifications and the '.nut' modification were tested in combination.

Results

Table 6 below summarises the results of Tests A, B and C for 8 possible combinations of modifications, together with the results of the single modifications.

This table also shows how the modifications re-categorise the following additional products:

- Chestnuts, almonds, hazelnuts, pecan nuts, plain peanuts, Brazil nuts, mixed nuts, nut roast, smooth peanut butter,
- Dried figs, dried dates, dried mixed fruit, raisins, sultanas, figs ready to eat, prunes ready to eat, apricots ready to eat
- Peanuts and raisins

Conclusions

All three types of modifications designed to ensure that high protein foods with particularly high levels of fat, sugar or salt are categorised as high in fat, salt or sugar foods i.e 'prot', 'A' and 'AP' modifications counteract the beneficial effects of the '.nut' modifications.

So for example with Modification .nut

- Walnuts and plain peanuts move from high in fat, salt or sugar to healthier
- Almonds, hazelnuts and pecan nuts move from intermediate to healthier
- and peanuts and raisins, Brazil nuts and mixed nuts move from high in fat, salt or sugar to intermediate

But with Modification AP11.nut

- Walnuts, pine nuts, plain peanuts, peanuts and raisins, Brazil nuts and mixed nuts remain categorized as high in fat, salt or sugar
- Almonds, hazelnuts and pecan nuts remain categorized as intermediate

Earlier in this paper it was concluded that both Modification AP11 and Modification .nut should be adopted. The conclusion from testing these modifications in combination (and other combinations of possible modifications designed to ensure that high protein foods with particularly high levels of fat, sugar or salt are categorised as high in fat, salt or sugar foods) is that they do not work well together.

(Note that Modification AP11 also has a detrimental effect on the categorisation of some dried fruit e.g. dried figs and figs ready-to-eat move from Healthier to Intermediate)

A possible solution

The negative effects of the AP11 Modification on the categorisation of nuts might be reduced by the following modification:

Modification FVN i.e. where the total points for fruit, vegetables and nuts are 5 then Modification AP11 does not apply

The rationale for the Modification FVN is that the consumption of foods which contain a large amount of fruit, vegetables and nuts should be given greater encouragement (on the basis of current public health recommendations) than foods containing a large amount of protein and fibre. Modification FVN means that foods containing a large amount of fruit, vegetables and nuts are not subject to Modification AP11, thereby exempting those products from the effects of this modification.

Results

Table 7 below summarises the results of Tests A, B and C for this modification with the AP11 modification and with and without the .nut modification

Table 8 (attached at annex 2) shows how Models WXY, and WXYAP11FVN.nut categorise individual foods, the same foods as in Table 4.1 of the Final Report on the further refinement and testing of Model SSCg3d.

Conclusions

Table 7 shows that adding the FVN modification to Model WXYAP11.nut restores all the beneficial re-categorisations of nuts lost by adding the AP11 modification to the .nut modification.

Table 7 also shows that the FVN modification restores some of the re-categorisations of dried fruit lost by applying the AP11 modification to Model WXY.

As pointed out earlier the AP11 modification reclassifies some fast foods which as high in fat, salt or sugar. Table 8 shows that that the FVN modification has no effect on these beneficial re-categorisations so that Takeaway Double Beef Patty in Sesame Seed Bun still scores 8 points instead of 3 with WXY and Takeaway cheeseburger scores 9 points instead of 4.

FVN, in effect, ensures that the AP11 modification does not apply to unprocessed fruit (including dried fruit), vegetables and nuts and to a few processed products containing very high levels of fruit, vegetable or nut.

If Modifications AP11 and .nut are both adopted then we recommend that the FVN should also be applied.

The Nutrient Profiling Model as agreed by the Agency's Board

This is a "simple scoring" system, where points are allocated on the basis of the nutritional content in 100g of the food or drink. There are three steps to working out the overall score for the food or drink - as follows:

Work out total 'A' points

A maximum of ten points can be awarded for each nutrient.

Total 'A' points = (points for energy) + (points for saturated fat) + (points for sugars) + (points for sodium)

The following table indicates the points scored, depending on the content of each nutrient in 100g of the food:

Points ⇒	0	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10
Energy (kJ)	≤ 335	>335	>670	>1005	>1340	>1675	>2010	>2345	>2680	>3015	>3350
Sat Fat (g)	≤ 1	>1	>2	>3	>4	>5	>6	>7	>8	>9	>10
Total Sugar (g)	≤ 4.5	>4.5	>9	>13.5	>18	>22.5	>27	>31	>36	>40	>45
Sodium (mg)	≤ 90	>90	>180	>270	>360	>450	>540	>630	>720	>810	>900

If a food or drink scores 11 or more 'A' points then it can not score points for protein unless it also scores 5 points for fruit, veg and nuts.

Work out total 'C' points

A maximum of five points can be awarded for each nutrient / food component.

Total 'C' points = (points for fruit, veg & nut content) + (points for fibre [either NSP or AOAC]) + (points for protein)

The following table indicates the points scored, depending on the content of each nutrient / food component in 100g of the food

Points ⇒	0	1	2	3	4	5*
Fruit, Veg & Nuts(%)	≤ 40	>40	>60	-	-	>80
NSP Fibre – (g)	≤ 0.7	>0.7	>1.4	>2.1	>2.8	>3.5
Or AOAC Fibre – (g)	≤ 0.9	>0.9	>1.9	>2.8	>3.7	>4.7
Protein (g)	≤ 1.6	>1.6	>3.2	>4.8	>6.4	>8.0

If a food or drink scores 5 points for fruit, veg & nuts the 'A' nutrient cut-off no longer applies.

Work out overall score

- If a food or drink scores less than 11 'A' points then the overall score is calculated as follows:
Overall score = (total 'A' points) minus (total 'C' points)
- If a food or drink scores 11 or more 'A' points but scores 5 points for fruit, vegetables and nuts then the overall score is calculated as follows.
Overall score = (total 'A' points) minus (total 'C' points)
- If a food scores 11 or more 'A' points but also scores less than 5 points for fruit, veg and nuts then the overall score is calculated as follows.
Overall score = (total 'A' points) minus (fibre points + fruit, veg and nuts points only) [i.e. no points for protein]

A food is classified as "less healthy" where it scores 4 points or more.

A drink is classified as "less healthy" where it scores 1 point or more
