Introduction

In August 2011, the Commission on a Bill of Rights published a Discussion Paper entitled ‘Do we need a UK Bill of Rights?’ The closing date for responses was 11 November 2011. We received over 900 responses and have listed all respondents alphabetically in this document. Where respondents requested anonymity or did not provide a name we have listed them as ‘anonymous’. A small number of respondents requested confidentiality and, as a result, they are not listed below. The list is divided into two sections: respondent organisations and bodies, and individual respondents. We have listed responses from more than one organisation or individual at the start of each section.
