Hi
Woohoo! First romantic holiday! I personally recommend Aruba. My VERY favourite Caribbean island and not full of shell suit Northerners! Perfect white beaches and nice shopping. You can get there straight from Miami with American Airlines. It's part of the Dutch Antilles and not known that much.

Hi

Just trying to sort you out some money with accounts ...
Just wanted to pick your brains ...
Me and boyfriend are thinking of flying over to Miami/South Beach to visit his father in August .. I really don't fancy staying in Miami for more than 2-3 days .
We were thinking of flying out somewhere nice and romantic for the rest of the holiday .. More of a beach , chilled holiday ... Can you think of anywhere ?
Maybe one of the Caribbean islands .. But I'm not sure where to look I know I don't fancy the keys or Jamaica .. I know I'm a fussy cow but it would be our first holiday together and I would like it to be somewhere nice.

Many thanks
Virgin Atlantic investigates ‘secret tip-offs’ to paparazzi

Exclusive Airline official resigns after email reveals celebrities’ flight times

Josh Halliday

A senior employee at Virgin Atlantic has resigned after allegations that the company passed private flight details of celebrities to a high-profile celebrity gossip agency.

The employee, who had been working at the airline for over a decade, is understood to have passed on flight information to a UK-based paparazzi agency called Big Pictures.

The company said in a statement that it had launched an immediate investigation into the matter.

"This is a serious matter and we are completely appalled by the allegations," the statement read. "We are working closely with the appropriate authorities and will take any necessary action to ensure that this does not happen again."

The employee, who was based in the company’s London office, is said to have resigned after the Guardian newspaper reported on the allegations.

The newspaper said it had obtained emails from the employee, which showed that flight details had been passed on to Big Pictures.

The company confirmed that it had received the emails and was investigating the matter.

The employee, who was named by the Guardian as Ashley Cole, is said to have been working as a supervisor at the company’s Upper Class customer service desk.

The Guardian said that Cole had been involved in a number of high-profile cases, including the case of Ashley Cole and Jessica Simpson, who were reportedly flown to Los Angeles on private jets.

The employee is said to have used company systems to access flight details and passed them on to Big Pictures, which then used them to create images of celebrities.

The employee is said to have admitted to the allegations in a meeting with Virgin Atlantic officials.

The company said it was releasing a statement in the coming days, and would not comment further until then.

Virgin Atlantic has been contacted for comment.
Contacts the key in hunt for the big picture

As are anywhere anybody with a camera phone can be a paparazzi, the competition for celebrity pictures is intense. The right exclusive photograph, sold worldwide, can still be worth over £300,000 - but they are hard to come by. To make matters more difficult, the amount that the news media are prepared to pay for pictures is rising, and tattooed picture desks worry increasingly about harassment and even violence as a consequence of good fortune. And each picture is not that surprising that others can be cut.

Jeff Moore, the chairman of the British Press Photographers’ Association, recalls working on a plane a few years ago, outside Heathrow, as the plane hurtled down the runway. About 50 people were screaming outside trying to get a photograph; the most obvious being a paparazzo, the competition for celebrity pictures is intense.

It is the sort of publicity that values are often used to. Whatever the competition, the celebrity news business is dominated by a handful of agencies, including Big Pictures, whose founder, Darrin Williams, below, became well known for his dyed blond hair and the Speedo he appeared in on Celebrity Big Brother. On the other hand, there is no shortage of agencies that work with a paparazzo, the most obvious being one of the few who is coming from planes that day.

At the same time, the airport owner offers celebrities and well-heeled members of the public the chance to avoid paparazzi by booking a private jet. Any part of the world can be critical for any photographer, the most important customer, to make a living.

There is no shortage of the famous or mildly famous who will work with a photographer for a little extra publicity. Inquiry into 'secret tip-offs' to paparazzi
